Dr. Richards joined Incyte Diagnostics in 2019. She is board certified in anatomic and clinical pathology.

Dr. Richards attended Barnard College, Columbia University in the city of New York where she earned a Bachelor of Arts degree in Political Science. From there, she completed post-baccalaureate studies in Pre-Medicine at Hunter College, City University of New York. At both universities, she was recognized for her efforts on the Dean's List. She then attended the New York State/ American Program at Sackler School of Medicine, Tel Aviv University, where she earned her medical degree.

Dr. Richards returned to New York and completed her residency at Montefiore Medical Center- Albert Einstein College of Medicine. Here, she was involved in a variety of research projects focusing on topics such as inflammatory bowel disease and colorectal cancer. During her residency Dr. Richards presented her work at six national meetings including the United States and Canadian Academy of Pathology (USCAP) and Digestive Disease Week (DDW).

Dr. Richards has completed two fellowships, the first in gastrointestinal and hepatic pathology at University of Washington Medical Center in Seattle. During this time, she worked closely with the hepatology and liver transplant teams and presented at many weekly tumor boards including primary and secondary liver and pancreaticobiliary as well as medical liver conference. She also continued her research interests, presenting at USCAP on the ampulla of Vater and collaborating with her colleagues on the validation of a congestive hepatic fibrosis scoring system.

Her second fellowship was in surgical pathology with a focus in gynecologic pathology at Stanford University Medical Center. Here, she spent extended time on the gynecologic pathology consult service in addition to other subspecialty consult and in-house services. She was actively involved with gynecologic pathology tumor board amongst other multi-subspecialty tumor boards and helped teach gynecologic pathology to clinical OBGYN residents. She also continued her academic interest in liver pathology, designing new hepatopathology curriculum materials for residents with graduated learning objectives and quizzes.

Dr. Richards has participated in a variety of professional and service activities throughout her career. She has been an ad hoc reviewer for the American Journal of Surgical Pathology and Human Pathology. While in Tel Aviv, she volunteered with Physicians for Human Rights at a mobile clinic and tutored a Darfurian refugee in English. She was the founder and captain of a charity running team while in residency that raised money for non-profit cancer research organizations and local non-profits in the Bronx.

Dr. Richards is a member of several professional societies including the Rodger C. Haggitt Gastrointestinal Pathology Society, Hans Popper Hepatopathology Society and others. Her hobbies include rock climbing, skiing, and collecting vintage prints and books by Frank H Netter.
